

The tap trends you should know about when renovating your kitchen

They're a functional feature and an essential part of any kitchen – and taps can

But with different colours, textures and their placement on your sink or wall, there's much to consider.

So how do you choose the right tap for your kitchen renovation? And what kitchen tap trends are in?

Mismatched colours

The days of choosing a single tap colour throughout your home may be gone with mismatched and contrasting colour choices trending this year.

Whether it's a brass tap in the kitchen and a brushed gunmetal piece in your bathroom, or a black feature tap in your laundry – home renovators are testing the waters by combining different coloured taps in different areas.

Warm metallics are tipped to be the in-thing this season with brushed brass and neutral colour tones also said to be popular.

Black accents

They've been a favourite in recent years and black taps are set to remain popular in 2023.

Black taps go with almost everything in a kitchen, including different types of benchtop materials or light fittings, can be used as a feature to create contrast and style.

And because of their ongoing popularity, there's lots of styles and price points of black taps to choose from.

If you're looking for products to match, NEFF's graphite grey range goes perfectly with brushed gunmetal, while our classic stainless-steel ovens, including the Choice recommended Slide&Hide® oven, can make a bold contrast for brushed brass or black taps.

Wall-mounted

The traditional sink-mounted tap continues to come in and out of fashion – but it's the wall-mounted style that is having a moment in 2023.

Mounting your mixer or spout (or both) to the wall creates an illusion of more space at your sink and on your benchtop, and can act as a stylish feature too.

If you're looking for other products that can be integrated or hidden to create more space, and Choice recommended

And if you're opting for a wall-mounted tap, remember to consider the functionality of it too – such as if it is moveable, has an extendable head or can reach the sides of your sink.

Full-service taps

And finally, there's a growing preference from home renovators to include taps that provide instant hot or cold water.

Convenience is something we're accustomed to in today's age, and this extends to the fixtures in our kitchens.

Whether it's for making a cup of tea or cooking a pot of pasta, instant water services are becoming more common in the modern .
