

Design trends to watch in winter 2023

Winter is upon us yet again and while the weather might be blue, the renovating and design trends certainly are not.

Patterns, pinks and pretty glass features are in this season, giving us a much-needed escape from the cool blast outside.

So if you're planning on sprucing up your home, undertaking a kitchen renovation or just wondering what the current trends in interior design are this winter, here's what's in at the moment.

So if you're planning on sprucing up your home, undertaking a kitchen renovation or just wondering what the current trends in interior design are this winter, here's what's in at the moment.

Patterns and tactile surfaces

Our love affair with fun and colour is set to remain in winter with patterns, layers and detail you can feel a must-have.

From Mediterranean-inspired tiles to rough stone benchtops and splashbacks, there are many ways to include patterns and textured surfaces in your space. If you're looking to test the water without going all out, consider the style and material you use for your cupboards or add character with a splashback.

For kitchens with a dining space attached, decorate with material-covered chairs (like leather or soft bally cotton) and furniture with rounded edges.

Paper lights

Paper lanterns have been around for hundreds of years and they're back in Vogue again with a modern twist.

With homeowners and decorators chasing soft, calming light, ambient lighting is an easy way to add warmth and style to spaces like dining and living rooms.

Brown and pink

Like a (modern) nod to the 70s, pinks and browns are back in – from fashion to design and décor.

Think peach-coloured walls, taupe furniture, pink kitchenware and everything in between. You might even be able to take a leaf from the Tuscan-inspired design book (another popular trend this year). And while it can be hard to match appliances with colour, NEFF Slide&Hide^o Graphite Grey ovens fits seamlessly within your cabinetry and won't detract from the overall aesthetic.

Muted colours are fresh and a little bit feminine.

Glass features

And if you can't get to Europe this year to marvel at the artistry and craftsmanship in places like Murano, Italy – you can, at least, keep up with design trends inspired by such locations.

Statement glass is top of the list for home renovators this season.

Taking inspiration from the colour and beauty of the Italian islands (and surrounding countries), and with a nod to the bygone 70s and 80s era, stunning handmade materials are a sure way to create a wow factor in your home this winter.

Our range of Slide&Hide^o ovens, including the Choice-recommended built-in oven, can add some contrasting colour and sparkle to your kitchen too.
